EDUCATE BY FILMS, IS EDISON'S ADVICE

Moving Pictures Are Certain to Impress Subjects on Students.

'SCHOOLS REPULSIVE'

Primary Grades Are Held Responsible for Dull College Student.

FEDERAL ACTION URGED

Inventor Tells of Own Success With Films With Orange Children.

Although Thomas A. Edison has found college men dull and "amazingly ignorant" he placed the blame for it yesterday on neither the men nor the colleges, but on the elementary schools where their education started. In the opinion of the inventor the primary schools are not functioning as they should.

In his laboratory in West Orange the inventor talked readily of his experiences in hiring and firing his own men, principally through the agency of his questionnaire or intelligence test, which has attracted wide attention. At the same time he made plain his criticism of the schools was not based entirely on his observations as an employer. Mr. Edison said he once spent eighteen months and a good deal of money in developing a system of education by moving pictures which really gave results.

"In this business," he said, referring to the Edison industries, "I look for a young fellow to be familiar with chemistry, electricity, mechanics, geography, politics, economics and to have a general knowledge of the fundamentals of business. If he reads the newspapers and keeps his brain free from atrophy he will have no trouble in passing the questionnaire ordeal."

"My experience is that college men don't measure up to the questionnaire on these essential points," he said emphatically. "About one in every twenty-three college men is graded A. That means the applicant gets a job. Two get grades of B and C, which isn't bad, but they aren't hired. The rest run all the way down to X Y Z, the lowest grade. I have tested about 600 men in this way."

"The critical point in a boy's mental life is between twelve and seventeen," Mr. Edison said. "If he doesn't begin to take notice, to read newspapers, to show interest in a variety of matters at this time there isn't a lot of hope for him. 'The fault in the present educational system does not lie primarily with the colleges and high schools, but with the primary schools.'"

"There is a remedy. Instead of boring a boy with words and books all day teach him with moving pictures. This is more vivid, more compelling a method of holding his attention."

Ten years ago Mr. Edison said he experimented as a pedagogue to a class of children of Orange, and found he could beat the schools on results by using motion pictures. An unseen influence prevented the application of the idea to the schools, so after more than a year of work he gave it up.

"A man with a powerful personality or a great newspaper could put that idea into effect," he said. "Some government organization, made up of men like those in the Bureau of Standards, which I think about 100 per cent. perfect, and free from political control, could get together some twenty or thirty thousand films of different grades and subjects and sell them to the States for display in schools. This would make the schools attractive for the children, and if we can do that we can advance civilization about 100 years in the next twenty. The big trouble our educators are facing is that the schools are repulsive to the children. With motion picture courses of study you could fire the truant officers and the children would not be late."

The education of parents of children and adults generally Mr. Edison dismissed summarily as "spilled milk." The future depends upon the present education of children, not of those who are now handling the affairs of the world.

PRESSMEN'S UNIONS WIN TWO YEAR FIGHT

To Compel Accounting by International President.

The two year fight of the pressmen's unions in New York and Chicago to depose their international officers and compel an accounting of funds collected for pensions was decided yesterday in favor of the unions by Federal Judge A. M. J. Cochran, of the Eastern District of Tennessee. An appeal will probably be taken.

This news was received yesterday at the offices of Printing Pressmen's Local No. 61 and Franklin Local No. 23, the so-called outlaw unions that broke away from the international organization at the time of the strike in the fall of 1918.

George L. Berry, international president, was charged with using union funds for private enterprises in connection with the foundation of a pressmen's home near Knoxville. He will be obliged to account for about $175,000.

SEIZED FOR SMUGGLING DIAMONDS FROM CANADA

Malone Prisoners Say They Found Gems on Farm.

Special Despatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

MALONE, N. Y., May 6.—Three men were arrested by customs officers here Thursday charged with smuggling $10,000 in diamonds into the United States from Canada, near Westfall, five miles north of Malone. The officers say they found three diamonds in the clothing of one of the prisoners, who are being held for the Federal Grand Jury.

The prisoners gave their names as William Abramson, 24, and Arthur Aronson, 28, both of New York city, and Bert Flury of Westville, Abramson, according to the officers, said he found the diamonds on Flury's farm. Customs men at Fort Covington, on the border, declare the men crossed into New York in a roadster.

TWO OF HIS 3 WIVES SEEK ANNULMENT

Summonses Served on Henry A. Newton in the Tombs.

Suits to have their marriages to Henry Ashton Newton, actor, annulled, were filed yesterday in the Supreme Court by Glenn Haverstack Newton, who was married to him September 11, 1919, and Iva Edmondson Newton who became his wife on September 5, 1919. Both actions seek the annulment because of Newton's alleged earlier marriage to Florence S. Madera, in August, 1911.

Frank P. Ufford appears as counsel for both women. The papers show the summons and complaint in Mrs. Glenn Newton's action were served on Newton in the Tombs by Mrs. Iva Newton, and in Mrs. Iva Newton's action by Mrs. Glenn Newton.

SCHWAB IS PRAISED FOR HIS WAR WORK

But He Dissents From Eulogies and Gives Credit to Collaborators.

GETS MODEL OF VESSEL

Emergency Fleet and Shipping Men Entertain Him at Dinner.

His former associates of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, aided by the members of the United States Shipping Board and ship builders and owners from the whole coastline of the country, gave a dinner to Charles M. Schwab at the Waldorf-Astoria last night and told him what they thought of him once and think of him still.

To keep the evening green in his mind they gave him a model of a standard 7,500 ton emergency freight ship, of the kind which was turned out under his direction at so fast a rate during the active days of the war, and to give the evening a feel of the sea the speakers' table was set up upon an imitation ship's bridge equipped with binnacle and telegraph and searchlight and a boat at each end under davits.

The speakers beside Mr. Schwab himself were Chester W. Cuthell, who was toastmaster; Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Corporation; William A. Thompson, vice-president of the Texas Company; Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, Major-Gen. George W. Goethals and Charles Pies, who was director-general of the Fleet Corporation at the time Mr. Schwab took hold.

The ship model had upon it an inscription plate reading: "To Charles M. Schwab in recognition of the distinguished services rendered by him to the United States of America and to the civilized world in building ships to win the war."

The sentiment thus set forth and various facts, figures and reminiscences to give it vitality made the text upon which the speakers built the things they had to say.

They told of the "suspicion and objection and innuendo" which Mr. Schwab had to overcome both in the minds of statesmen and of plain men when he took hold of the task of making sea carriers for the war and made his beginning of shipbuilding from yards which were only locations in many cases and places scarcely found in many others. And how, by his energy and capacity and enthusiasm, he put the job across so that when fighting stopped there were yards turning out ships or something for ships in every available cove on both coast lines. And every speaker on every point gave all the credit to him.

From this Mr. Schwab dissented sharply when his turn came to reply and express himself concerning the ship model and the givers. He declared that what he thought about those with whom he was placed in association when he buckled down to his war job ought to be manifest in the fact that he made no changes in the panel and that what was obvious therein he now wished to put in clear words, which he did, naming names and giving every man his full due. About the only thing irrelevant to the party which was said during the evening was stated by Mr. Pies in a digression concerning the idle ships which the country owns, and what ought to be done about them. He declared that the only way the country can ever be re-infused with the spirit which once made its merchant marine the greatest in the world is to put the idle ships at the disposal of a single executive—who, however, must be just the right man and no one else. At the present time seven men decree what shall be done about them.

Among those at the dinner were Senator William M. Calder, Howard Connelley, Paul D. Cravath, Darwin P. Kingsley, Frank C. Munson, E. G. Grace, H. H. Raymond, John D. Ryan, Swager Shirley and Paul M. Warburton.
